Gentlemen,

In 1974, around the end of July to mid-August a "twister" went diagonally across the St. John river and the village of Hartland, N.B. It tore down a strip of trees on the east bank of the river below the bridge.[1] For further details, I suggest that you write to the mayor of Hartland as my source is not very good at explanations.

[1] also trees on west side above the bridge

The brother of my friend was building a 40 X 75 foot sheet metal potato shed and he had it almost completed when the twister lifted it and turned it end for end, ripping out the anchor bolts. Two weeks later he had his replacement almost completed when it too was demolished. His third attempt was successful.

Sincerely

J. D. McLean
