FREAK STORM, ELGIN COUNTY, ONTARIO.

THE GLOBE, TORONTO, SATURDAY JULY 13TH. 1935.

STORM DATE. EARLY P.M., FRI. JULY 12TH. 1935.

HAIL TAKES TOLL IN ELGIN COUNTY.

FREAK STORM SWEEPS AREA, DESTROYING BARNS AND CROPS.

ST. THOMAS, JULY 12. (Special). Damage to farm buildings and crops that will run into the thousands of dollars was caused early this afternoon by a freak storm that swept over the western part of ELGIN COUNTY, concentrating on a strip of land about three miles in width in the district near EAGLE, about twenty-eight miles west of the city.

Wind, rain and hail swept the area, blowing down several farm buildings and a number of large trees and flattening fields of grain. Two large barns, about two miles west of EAGLE, were badly damaged, and a large silo twisted from its foundations.

The fall of hailstones was very heavy for a few minutes, doing much damage to crops. Residents of the district reported that it was like a miniature hurricane. Men were out with teams after the storm, clearing the trunks and limbs of trees that were blown on No. 3 HIGHWAY. The storm swept on west over LAKE ERIE.

Very heavy downpours of rain occurred in PORT STANLEY, WEST LORNE, three miles north of EAGLE and FINGAL, with little wind damage reported.

Emergency calls were sent to the rural Hydro Department in this city during the afternoon from the district west of FINGAL, where the storm damaged rural lines.

Only a sprinkling of rain fell in the city and east of here.
