STABLE ROOF LIFTED BY GALE

(Special Despatch to The Globe.)

Petrolea, April 20.—A violent gale from the west, accompanied by a cloudburst, swept over the town about 7 o'clock this evening. Besides other lesser damage done by it, the roof of Robert Kettle's cement block stable on Huggard street, 40 by 85 feet, was lifted bodily from the walls and hurled into the adjoining yards. No damage was done to the men or horses in the building. The residents of the neighboring houses had a close call when the huge mass fell.
