Tempest hits Calgary

CALGARY — A summer tempest whirled into the Calgary area with a vengeance Saturday, uprooting trees and pounding several areas in and around the city with marble-sized hail. When the brief but potent thunderstorm cleared, 19-year-old Courtney Bardonner of the Springbank area just west of the city went looking for the roof from her barn. Bardonner eventually tracked the splintered remnants of the wooden roof to a ditch about 100 metres away, while smaller pieces of roof were carried twice that distance.

No pay cut for aide

Premier Don Getty is shifting the head of his Calgary office into a job that comes with a lower pay range. But Terry Roberts, Calgary office director, isn't taking a cut in salary, says Barb Deters, communications
