ORANGEVILLE SUN. THURSDAY JULY 10TH. 1879.

STORM DATE. About 2.30P.M., THURSDAY JULY 3RD. 1879.

HARRISBURG. ONT. FOUR MILES NORTHEAST OF BRANTFORD.

A most fearful storm of wind, rain, and hail, passed through HARRISBURG about half past two Thursday afternoon, tearing great trees up by their roots and twisting others off as though they had been mere sticks, in its fury. Everything in the shape of vegetation was levelled to the ground. A building belonging to the GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY was completely demolished, and four cars which had been standing on the sidings, were blown over the switch, and on the main line, a distance of five or six hundred yards, although two brakes were set on them. Flying missiles were hurled through the air, making it very dangerous, even to those who had found shelter inside. The hailstones were an inch in diameter and the oldest settlers say they never saw such a storm before in these parts.

METEOROLOGICAL SERVICE, DOMINION OF CANADA. MONTHLY WEATHER REVIEW.

JULY 1879.

A disturbance, which on the 2nd., covered the Western States, on the 3rd., moved Northeastward to NORTHERN ONTARIO, drawing hot Southwesterly winds across the province, andcausing local rains and thunderstorms at most places. On the 4th. as it moved eastward with increasing energy etc
